"Bought and Paid For."
Tonight at the Auditorium, "Bought and Paid For" will be seen in this city for the second time. The success of this splendid play at William A. Brady's Playhouse in New York, where it enjoyed a prosperous run of one consecutive year, will be echoed here by the large attendance to witness it this evening. The story as it unfolds grips the interest and holds the tense attention of the audience from the moment the curtain is raised on the first act up to the finale. George Broadhurst has drawn his characters true to life, while the comedy intermingled in the plot is said to be thoroughly delightful. It is a play that will live in the annals of American dramatic history, and no one should miss the opportunity of seeing it. The large advance sale for this evening's performance shows that our local playgoers patronize only the successful attractions from the metropolis.

"The Traffic in Souls."
Penelope Smythe Percell in the Columbus Dispatch says: "You men with little sisters—you mothers with daughters—you women who have trailed in the dust and dirt the dignified title of 'Madame'—there is something for you to see at the Southern Theatre." "They call it a picture, drama—but call it what you will, laugh at it, because of melodramatic scenes and sentimentality—there is much of truth to be seen in those films. Truths so terrible, even though pictured for monetary gain, that those who look on cannot but think of the horror of them."

The story of how girls are lured; how things are distorted that they may be taken into dens of iniquity, is ably set forth with an underlying horror that men can become so mixed with immoral filth, and that women can so prostitute the name they bear. "Again I say—men with little sisters, mothers with daughters and sons (yes, even the daughters and the sons themselves), go and see 'Traffic in Souls,' that you may fight for womanhood; for those who are taken from us; who disappear into the awful night of Oblivion. And you, who have brought low the dignified title of 'Madame'—who gloat over tender and lovely youth—stop and think!"

At the Auditorium, four days, starting Sunday matinee, January 25.

Howe's Pictures.
"Prodigious, astounding, overwhelming" is the description given by Lyman H. Howe's reproduction of the Panama Canal. The excavations which included the removal of a mountain, created the greatest spectacle of activity in history.

In these days when an animated camera records events exactly as they occur, "stay-at-homes" may witness the most heroic achievement of all ages—the building of the canal—as satisfactorily as if they had spent many years tirelessly watching its progress under the tropical sun. All that is necessary is attendance at the Auditorium on Thursday and Friday, January 29 and 30, when Howe will present the most remarkable reproduction known in the annals of motion photography. His films form the vehicle by which the spectator is made to fully understand the great engineering feat which will unite two oceans at Panama and bring the opposite sides of the world into a closer relation than the optimist of yesterday ever dreamed of.

Each step in the construction of the great locks, from the early ditch to the moments when the concrete took its final form, was followed by the action of the cameras.

The Panama Canal reproduction and others of a particularly lively character offer an unusual opportunity for creating that startling degree of realism that distinguishes Howe's exhibition over all others. Seat sale starts Tuesday.

NEWS OF THE DAY ON THE GREAT WHITE WAY

New York, Jan. 24—Just the other day a New Yorker who was born in Scotland and educated at St. Andrews told me you will not believe this, but it is true that he considered Robert Burns a vastly overrated poet. I will not give his name, for otherwise he is a braw, gude mon, and he would not look pretty torn in two. Leaving this misguided gentleman out of the question, however, and most of the metropolitan apes and daughters of Scotia will be found tonight celebrating the natal day of Scotland's greatest poet. The birthday of the bard falls on the twenty-fifth, but most of the Scottish organizations of this city will hold their Burns celebrations tonight. Banquets and oratory will feature the evening, and tongues loosened by a wee drop of Scotch will recite verses and sing the praises of Scotia's bard. A few New Yorker's still living will recall the great Burns centenary banquet held at the old Astor House fifty-five years ago, when William Cullen Bryant was the chief speaker. In that masterly address Bryant said: "Burns was great by the greatness of his sympathies—sympathies acute and delicate, yet large, comprehensive, boundless. When he came from the hand that formed him, God breathed into him, in larger measure than into other men, the spirit of that love which constitutes his own essence and made him more than other men—a living soul."

One of New York's foremost playhouses, the Empire Theatre, will reach its twenty-first birthday tomorrow, for it was on January 25, 1893, that its doors were first opened to the public. Twenty-one years constitutes a long lease of life for a Gotham theatre, and the Empire is now the patriarch among uptown amusement houses. The Empire's first audience witnessed "The Girl I Left Behind Me" by David Belasco and Franklin Fyles. Mr. Belasco was then at the beginning of his successful career. The first patron to hand a ticket to the Empire doorman was George M. Pullman, of sleeping car fame. "The Girl I Left Behind Me" was a drama of western frontier military life, and it had a run of over a year. Later it was from the stage of the Empire that Margaret Anglin, Henry Miller, Viola Allen, Maude Adams, James K. Hackett, Annie Russell, William Faversham and dozens of others graduated into the honors of stardom. Nearly all of these graduates remember the Empire. Miss Maude Adams began this month her annual engagement at the Empire, where, in 1893, she made her first metropolitan appearance as a star in J. M. Barrie's "The Little Minister." It is in another Barrie play, "The Legend of Lenora," that Miss Adams is now appearing.

Maclaine of Lookout, the young Scottish laird who is considered by many Scotchmen to be the legitimate chief of the Maclaine clan, has announced that he will soon make another trip to New York to replenish the fallen family fortunes by singing comic songs on the stage. The Maclaine was here last year and made quite a bit of money by his vaudeville engagements, but it is understood that he lost most of it in a tent show with which he has been traveling in his native Highlands. The laird will celebrate his thirty-fourth birthday today, having been born on Jan. 24, 1880. The Maclaine is a godson of the Duke of Argyll, and a close friend of Prince Alexander of Battenburg. He declares that he was so nervous that he did not do himself justice on his first theatrical invasion of New York, and is anxious for another chance. The Maclaine comes of one of the oldest of Scottish families, and the first chief of his clan and the first Maclaine are supposed to have been brothers.

Subscribers to the International Magazine who did not receive this month's issue on time need not blame the publishers. They got out the issue according to schedule, but when they took it around to the postmaster he took just one squint at the cover and then ordered the shameless proprietors to think of something else in the way of a cover design. As the magazines with the original covers were not placed on sale, it will be useless for the reader to attempt to satisfy her curiosity, but it is alleged that the design consisted of a lady wearing the costume favored by Lady Godiva, or Eve before the fall, consisting of one expansive smile. George Sylvester Viereck, the reformed poet who is now the editor of the International, offered to cut out of the cover all but the lady's head and feet, but the postal authorities refused that solution of the difficulty. A similar case came up some months ago, when the Daily Call a socialist publication, started to publish a series of articles headed "What Every Girl Should Know." The postmaster objected, and for several days the Call ran a column that was blank except for the caption, "What Every Girl Should Know," and the explanation, "Nothing, according to the postoffice authorities."

A new religious edifice called the Daily Temple, which is consecrated to the purpose of bringing together, not only the various sects and divisions of Christianity, but all sects of all religions: The opening ceremony consisted of reading selections from Christian, Jewish, Mohammedan, Buddhist, Confucian, and Hindu scriptures. A Buddhist priest from India, a Turkish student at Columbia, a Chinese scholar and a Japanese savant were among those who participated in the readings. Among those interested in the movement, it is said, are the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Howard Carrington, the author Prof. Hyslop, the eminent scientist, James F. Morton, Jr., lawyer and philosophic anarchist; Arthur Giovannitti, labor leader and poet, and the Rev. Irwin St. John Tucker of St. Mark's-in-the-Bowery.

People not afraid of an idea will find one of the chief joys of a visit to New York in attendance at one of the banquets of the Sunrise Club. There gather to eat and talk, but principally to talk, some of the rarest spirits in the metropolis. Edwin Walker, long a leader in the freethought movement, is the chairman of the club, but he doesn't ask that anybody else agree with his views. Indeed, acquiescence is a crime at this gathering, which is an intellectual Donnybrook Fair. Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman, the former plump and tame in appearance but a firebrand of impassioned oratory, the latter suave and polished and worldly and blasé, are often in attendance. Seated next to them may be a man of the cloth, a little frightened at the proximity of Emma. Then there is a little lawyer of wide reputation who is the club wit, a successful poet who looks like a business man, a Jewish millionaire who talks socialism, an aged and mild-looking woman doctor who can say things that sound very unorthodoxly.

A Hebrew editor, who is said to be the king of the Jews, the grandson of a famous patriotic poet who practices law in the daytime and preaches anarchy at night, a long-haired cartoonist, and any number of lawyers, doctors, newspaper men and authors—the latter including, it is said, a scholarly and handsome old gentleman who writes Bertha M. Clay stories for a living.

Theatrical Notes

Tragedy and comedy both originated in Greece some 500 years B. C. The early Roman dramatic writers belong to a little later period.

The drama was introduced into England by Geoffrey, a Frenchman. He was the Abbot of St. Albans. He produced with the aid of his priests and scholars "The Miracles of St. Catherine." This was in 1110 A. D.

In 1378 a petition was presented to King Richard II. by the scholars of St. Paul's school praying that some persons be prohibited from representing publicly the history of the Old Testament.

The first English tragedy worthy of consideration was by Thomas Sackville and called "Gorboduc." It was acted before Queen Elizabeth on Jan. 18, 1562, and printed in 1565.

The first Italian comedy was Baccio's "Timone," produced before 1494, but the pastoral drama by Agnolo Poliziano, entitled "Orfeo," appeared in 1472. In the same year the first Spanish comedy was written.

The first Italian opera is said to be "Daphne," which dates from about 1594.

The first patent to act plays was granted by Queen Elizabeth in 1574 to James Burbage, the father of the great tragedian, Richard B. Burbage, an actor in the Earl of Leicester's company.

The first theater built in London was erected on the site of what is now Holywell Lane, Shoreditch. The cost of the building was between six hundred and seven hundred pounds.

The Theater Royal, Drury Lane, was built in 1663, and the noted Lincoln's Inn theater was erected in 1672.

At the present time there are no fewer than sixty-four theaters in London alone and sixty-six variety theaters. In addition to these there are many other halls licensed for dramatic performances.

The library of the British Museum contains upwards of six hundred thousand play bills bound in three hundred and forty volumes.

Modest, indeed, is the woman who blushes for her own cheek.

President Wilson's Anti-Trust Message

(Enquirer.)
1. Effectual prohibition of the interlocking of directorates of great corporations — banks, railroads, industrial, commercial and public service bodies.
2. A law to confer upon the Interstate Commerce Commission the power to superintend and regulate the financial operations by which railroads are henceforth to be supplied with the money they need for their proper development and improved transportation facilities.
3. Definition of the "many harmful restraints of trade" by explicit legislation supplementary to the Sherman law.
4. The creation of a commission to aid the courts and to act as a clearing house of information in helping business to conform with the law.
5. Provision of penalties and punishments to fall upon individuals responsible for unlawful business practices.
6. Prohibition of holding companies and a suggestion that the voting power of individuals holding shares in numerous corporations might be restricted.
7. Giving to private individuals the right to found suits for redress on facts and judgments proved in Government suits, and providing that statute of limitations should run only from the date of conclusion of the Government's action.
Above are the seven propositions which the President deems necessary to be enacted into law in order that private monopoly and unreasonable restraint of trade shall be brought to an end in the United States.
The message was in a more hopeful and confident tone than those that preceded it; gave evidence of far better understanding between the Executive, his Administration and the business interests of the country, and in no particular could it be construed as a raid or attack upon vested rights or interests.
The sentence of the message which carries the spirit of the entire document is that which states: "The antagonism between business and the Government is over," and the entire population of the country will echo that sentiment and rejoice at these words of the Chief Magistrate of the republic.
Let the Congress now take up this legislative duty and act in harmony with that thought and conclusion of the President, "to give expression to the best judgment of America, to what we know to be the business conscience and honor of the land. The Government and business men are ready to meet each other half way in a common effort to square business methods with both public opinion and law."
With such a conservative and amicable call upon Congress and business to co-operate cordially in securing legislation to eliminate existing evils and abuses, it certainly appears that the harassing of business has almost run its course, and that henceforth it will be made plain as to the meaning and application of Federal anti-trust law, and only those who are willfully disregarding its provisions will be found practicing illegal methods.
There is little doubt of the approval by Congress of the lines of action laid down by the President.
Some of them will be favored by the adherents and representatives of each of the three great political parties, but the discussion will develop differences as to details of application and as to the scope of the proposed legislation on some of the propositions.
For instance, the third article of the above series, calling for a "definition of the many harmful restraints of trade" by explicit legislation supplementary to the Sherman law," will be certain to bring before the Congress the question as to the status of labor unions and farmers' associations, manufacturers' organizations and other bodies which have direct relations with the business of the country, and are often charged by antagonistic forces with restraints of trade.
In this proposition the President has tossed to Congress a very Pandora's box of troubles in view of the approaching senatorial and congressional elections.
It will be interesting to the country to observe the congressional treatment of this piece of political dynamite.
The ambitious Osaka Mercantile Steamship company intends to circumnavigate the globe in both directions. Before 1916 it will have a service from the Orient through the Panama canal to New York, and another line through the Suez canal to Europe. Eventually both services will be extended across the Atlantic, establishing round-the-world services in both directions by way of New York. The Japanese have a large population and a small and generally sterile country. A large part of the population has got its living from fisheries because it could not get land to cultivate. Like other peoples that have been pre-eminently maritime, the Japanese have been driven to the sea by necessity.
Congressman Victor Murdock thinks President Wilson's Anti-Trust program is "inadequate," but outside of this there is not a discordant voice to be heard in the chorus of assent from men of all parties and in all stations of life. And transatlantic opinion echoes its approval. Such unanimity gives complete assurance that the President is right in his suggestion of ways and means of perpetuating our "constitution of peace" about to be written. If anything were needed to make this assurance complete the dissent of Murdock would supply the lack.

Bleeding Mexico.
In Mexico, in other days, fair maidens from their windows smiled, while lovers sang their buoyant lays, describing passions deep and wild. But that was in the dear old times before reformers took the helm, and filled with sorrows, tears and crimes, that once serene and happy realm. In Mexico, some years ago, the mother rocked her child to sleep, and prayed, in accents sweet and low, that holy saints the child might keep. But that was when the Tyrant held his country free from strife and storm before the banner of Reform. But now the land is stark and red where once the peasant turned the sods; the mother weeps above her dead, and shakes her fist at saints and gods. In Mexico the children played, through balmy evenings, on the green; and little lad and little maid no ghost of trouble e'er had seen. But now their hearts are chilled with fear, their souls are shrunken with their pain; for death is ever stalking near and dead men lie in every lane. And Mexico, where grief had birth when once old things were overthrown, should teach the nations of the earth to let the "Well Enough" alone.

Issue Joined on the Warnes Tax And Liquor License Laws; Cox Accepts Challenge of Republicans

Columbus, Jan. 24.—Gov. James M. Cox made public his reply to the demands of the minority committee asking the repeal of the Warnes tax law and the amendment of the liquor license law. The governor's statement follows:
Hon. C. J. Howard, Hon. M. A. Broadstone, Hon. C. A. Reid, Hon. C. D. Conover, Hon. Oscar E. Diser, Committee:
Gentlemen—I have your communication of Jan. 22, in which you recommend to the executive department of this state that there be submitted for the consideration of the legislature a change in the liquor license law and the repeal of the Warnes taxation measure, the suggestion from you being based, as you represent, upon my having "invited the Republican minority of the general assembly to make recommendations to you for a call for such legislation to the special session of the Eightieth general assembly of Ohio as we (meaning you) should deem necessary for the welfare of the people of the state."
It was my thought that some of the minority senators and representatives might present to Messrs. Howard and Reid, their leaders, emergency conditions which ought, in full consideration of public interest, be given attention at the special session.
The governor is presumed to be the representative of all the people of all parties, and it was the desire to give the agency to which your minority associates might make their appeal the fullest opportunity to present the needs in their respective communities. Whether the subjects which you suggest for presentation to the assembly can be considered emergencies I leave you in full conscience to reflect upon.
It does not appear from consultation of the records when the license and tax laws were placed upon final passage that there was unanimous opposition upon the part of the five gentlemen making up your committee. It can not but be regarded as highly significant that after making an entire survey of all that has been done in this state within a year you gentlemen, representing the minority party, complain of but two measures, one of which you would repeal and the other you would amend. This is a confessed indorsement, therefore, of the whole legislative program with the exception of two laws, and the executive could not but appear ungracious if he did not give voice to the fullest appreciation of the compliment as directly implied by this manifestation of legislative candor.
You propose a change in the liquor license law, but while you register a complaint you make no concrete suggestion. I need not remind you that it is much easier to criticize a law than it is to submit a change in its provisions which might be generally regarded as an improvement. You say that the right to select licensing officers should be delegated to "proper county authority." It can not but be a deep-seated curiosity in the minds of the people as to what the "proper county authority" is. Inasmuch as every member of your committee, if I am correctly advised, voted to make the county commissioners elective, then it is perfectly fair to assume that you still hold to this idea. In the face of the admitted inefficiency of the license law, any person who now obtrudes the suggestion that the commissioners in the wet counties—and there are commissioners nowhere else—be elected, may have cast upon him the general suspicion that he seeks to break down the machinery which is making law enforcement possible, everywhere, and in every community.
Your committee makes the observation that a change be made so that "the chief executive of this state may be elevated above the political entanglements of the license business."
I know of no more dignified participation in government. I can conceive of no more useful executive function than that the governor, accountable to all the people and responsible under the constitution and his oath of office to enforce the laws of the state, should be given the fullest police power of this great commonwealth to make law enforcement a reality and not a shadow.
With reference to the taxation law: The situation created by its passage presents these two striking characteristics:
First—The unpopularity of the measure among those whose unfounded fears have been aroused by the tax dodger; and
Second—The inclination on the part of some public officials whose security in tenure of office is of supreme concern, to let expediency transcend principle and sense of duty.
Permit me to remind you, gentlemen, that in this enlightened day a vast majority of the people believe the highest function of a public officer to be a courageous stand for the right even though temporarily there may be, in some quarters, considerable opposition.
There is not a member of the Ohio legislature who does not know that the system of using property for taxation under the old order is the most glaring travesty, and conscious as we all are of this fact the man who hesitates to act as his intelligence and his conscience suggest should, in self-respect, hand his commission back to his people.
There is nothing new in the prov-

Wisdom from Washington

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.
Washington, Jan. 24.—[Special.]—The work of passing measures which will strengthen the Sherman anti-trust law and regulate big business promises to consume as much time and cause as lengthy debates as did the currency and tariff bills. Various committees were quick to begin work as soon as President Wilson read his message to congress, in which he outlined his views, which are likewise the views of the Democratic majorities.
Business throughout the country was not shocked by the message; the suggestions and trust remedies were expected. It remains to be seen whether or not the administration will make good the trust plank in its platform as it did the pre-election promises as regarded the currency question and the tariff bill.
Farm Credit Bill.
Another important measure which is expected to occupy much time of the present session of congress is the passage of a bill providing ample farm credits so as to make unnecessary a repetition of the loans to banks throughout the south and southwest, as was the case last fall. The administration believes that the farmer should be aided; that means should be provided enabling him to properly finance his crop. With this end in view several bills have been drawn, and it is expected that one will pass at this session.
Injected the Tariff.
They can't keep the tariff out of the discussions in the senate if there is the slightest excuse for bringing it in. The attempt to do something for the farmer led to a diversion the other day into which was injected the high cost of living and the effect of the tariff on prices. Senator Bristow asserted that the price of live stock had been lowered, but that the price of meats to the consumer remained the same. Then Senator Reed of Missouri came forward with a suggestion about enlarged markets for the American farmer. This brought Senator Gullinger up, and Reed remarked:
"I hope the senator from New Hampshire is not going to propose that old, obsolete fake of the home market."
And then they were off in a gallop, and the tariff was the topic for two hours or more. No one was convinced, and mighty little information was presented.
Made No Pretense.
"You Republicans," said Boomer of Missouri to Willis of Ohio during the discussion of the rid-r on the postoffice appropriation bill taking assistant postmasters from under the civil service, "are opposing this legislation because you want to hold Republicans in office. I am for it because I want to get the Republicans out and Democrats in their places."
And that was about all there was in the whole contest. The "outs" wanted to oust the "ins."
Might Get Experience.
That old Jay Gould story about the fellow going into business with him and furnishing the money and coming out with the experience was brought into the Alaska debate by inference the other day. The discussion was between Lippitt of Rhode Island and Borah of Idaho.
"I have no doubt," said Lippitt, "that if the senator from Idaho and myself were to build a railroad in Alaska we would screw."
"I would be sure to agree with the senator because he would have the money," said Borah.
"I might have it to start with," retorted Lippitt.
If a preacher desires to attract a good deal of attention he must live in a small town. City people have actors and baseball players to admire.

SAFETY FIRST

To an ever increasing extent people are realizing that SAFETY is the first consideration in investing money. This accounts for the diminishing sale of stocks and other manifestations of a growing caution on the part of the public.
More and more are people coming back to depend on such sterling savings institutions as this, where funds are invested in first mortgages on real estate, with every possible safeguard.

"RUBBER NECK" BARGE FOR THE PANAMA CANAL

(Associated Press Telegram) Washington, Jan. 24.—Not less than 1,500,000 cubic yards of earth and rock, and possibly more will have to be removed from the famous Cucaracha slide in the Culebra cut before it will cease to be a menace to the channel, according to advice received at the Isthmian canal commission today. The engineers with constant work with seven dredges have managed to keep open a channel 160 feet wide at the narrowest point. But the whole side of the hill continues in slight motion from the top clear to the edge of the canal channel and the slide is more than a third of a mile long.

The greatest "rubber neck" conveyance in public use will be the passenger carrying barge which is now being fitted up to carry sightseers through the Panama canal. Its foundation is a steel and dump barge brought to the Isthmus in 1909 and it is 154 feet long, 32 feet beam, 10 feet seven inches deep and 500 gross tons.

Like the familiar "sightseers" trucks the seats are arranged in tiers gradually descending from a height of 8 feet 3 inches in the rear to 2 feet at the forward end, and there is also standing room for passengers on the roof. The barge will seat 276 passengers and a fare of $1.50 will be charged.

LITTLE DISCUSSIONS OF LOVE AND MARRIAGE

BY BARBARA BOYD

Artistic Temperaments.

"It takes a lot of courage or foolhardiness, I don't know which, to marry the artistic temperament, doesn't it?" asked the Bachelor Girl.

"A long bank account would do, wouldn't it?" queried the Bachelor.

"It would help. But it wouldn't ease all the joys one gets from the artistic temperament," responded the Bachelor Girl. "And it would have to be very long, too. For I think the game the person of artistic temperament enjoys most is spending money. After all, though, I am not so sure that money counts. The artistic person just wants things, and he accumulates them without regard to money; or he wants to do things, and he does them without regard to people."

"By accumulating things without regard to money, do you mean that people with the artistic temperament steal?"

"In plain English, it amounts to that; though it is generally called running up bills."

"Lots of people run up bills who have no intention of stealing."

"That's true. But they do have some intention of paying. But the person of artistic temperament never bothers his head about paying. That is the least of his worries. And that is the reason that I say to be married to such a person, especially if you have a New England conscience, is trying. I have a friend who is situated that way, and the agony that woman endures is beyond any brand the inquisition ever called out."

"There is nothing artistic about me," argued the Bachelor.

"The husband of this friend of mine," went on the Bachelor Girl, ignoring the Bachelor's remark, "must have flowers about him. So he orders home the most expensive cut flowers. And he must have Oriental rugs and pieces of statuary and bits of pottery, and he buys them recklessly whenever he sees anything that strikes his fancy. He says he is perfectly miserable with crude, inartistic things about, and that he must have surroundings to nourish his spirit. And so from the way their home looks, and the way he dresses, every one thinks they are well off, though they scarcely have a cent, and he runs up bills everywhere. And his wife can't very well say anything, for she can't expose him. And she has to pinch and screw and make excuses to tradesmen, and in a way be a hypocrite, which she loathes. But what can she do? She talks to him, and argues with him, and tries to show him how contemptible his conduct is. But her words glance off like a toy arrow from an armor plate. He is perfectly satisfied with his attitude toward life and he is utterly unable to comprehend her. And there you are."

"It is odd how such mismatched people get together, isn't it?" mused the Bachelor.

"Before marriage, the artistic temperament seems delightful, because such a person is usually charmingly whimsical and original. He is never dull, and time never hangs heavy in his company. But few of us follow out in thought just what this whimsicality and originality mean when applied to the everyday facts of life. When it has to be lived with twenty-four hours out of the twenty-four, and must be used for earning a living and paying bills, it is apt to lose a lot of its glitter."

"I always thought your long suit was good hard sense," observed the Bachelor.

"But it is just possible that, like many another man, you might be mistaken," scoffed the Bachelor Girl.

Miss Mina Fletcher, Mrs. J. C. Bonshire and Miss Bonshire assisted with the music. Fifteen boys attended the Bible class on Tuesday evening. The lesson was on Jesus' visit to Mary and Martha at Bethany.

The Federation of Women's clubs met in the building Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. C. A. Harter, who has been confined to his home the past ten days with mumps, has returned to his work. J. D. Hebele, who has spent several months in the city working on the new light plant, has vacated room No. 12. Mr. Hebele went to Buffalo to visit his parents.

General Secretary Frank L. Johnson spoke before the teachers and parents of the Granville Public schools on Friday afternoon. Charles Gardner of the senior class has returned from Pittsburgh where he has worked for several months, and is now welcomed as a regular visitor at the building.

The boys' meeting last Sunday was attended by 150 boys. An interesting address was given by A. R. Evans of the Licking County Bank.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Ladies! Try this! Darkens beautifully and nobody can tell—Brings back its gloss and thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Agents, Hall's drug store.

LABOR NOTES

Tomorrow (Sunday) morning at 9 o'clock the Trades and Labor Assembly will hold its regular session and all delegates are expected to be present. You will be interested in the proceedings.

If permission can be had from the commissioners organized labor through its Central Body Trades Assembly, will be pleased to furnish a fine large specimen cedar tree to be planted in the Court House park, and it shall be the perpetual municipal Christmas tree, and the seven thousand and union men in Newark will look out for the success of the venture.

The Board of Trade committee (of which Bro. W. M. Morgan is a member) presented a communication to the Board of Trade favoring a free employment bureau, commencing February 1, 1914, and continuing for a period of four months, upon an experimental basis, and that all manufacturing plants of the city, and all Granger organizations of the county be invited to aid in the formation of said free employment bureau. Said recommendations were carried unanimously, and endorsed by the Board of Trade.

Our last meeting, January 11, was a large one, and some very good legislation was enacted for the benefit of all workmen. The journal of last meeting was approved as read by Pro-Tem Secretary Cliff Rosebrough. Many communications were read and referred to proper committees. Bros. Julius Juch and C. M. Johnson of the Typographical union, together with Bros. Carl Maxwell of No. 152 Molders, Bros. Robert Williams and Alva Hays of the Ice Handlers' union were duly obligated by President Morgan.

A good report was made by the infirmity committee, through the chairman, Bro. W. A. Archer, and by a prevailing motion was received and placed upon the journal. Labor memorial day was taken up and discussed, and on and on, at some length, and passed unanimously (The writer failed to get the date fixed upon). Brothers, let us begin the work of organizing of all workmen into unions of their crafts, and we must not stop our efforts until every worker has been unionized in our city. And don't forget the union label. See that it is upon your hat, clothes and shoes. If it is possible, get the label on everything you buy.

WHY NOT SLEEP IN THE OPEN?

DO YOU SLEEP out of doors? Have you an outdoor sleeping porch? If not, why not? It certainly isn't because you can't afford it, because the State Board of Health has planned the one above at a total cost of about $20. The model above is one of the features of the great Ohio Public Health Exhibit, which the State Board of Health sends to this city, and which is designed to create a local sentiment for better health conditions.

If you are anxious to investigate the question of outdoor sleeping, or any other proposition in which your general health is involved, don't fail to visit this exhibit while it is in the county. Admission is free.

Even when they are all wrapped up in themselves the manners of some people are rather cold.

EASY WAY TO GET RID OF PIMPLES

Resinol Really Does What Cosmetics Are Supposed to Do.

It is so easy to get rid of pimples and blackheads with Resinol, and it costs so little, too, that anyone whose face is disfigured by these eruptions is foolish to keep on with useless creams, washes or complicated "beauty treatments." Here's the way to do it: Rub your face for several minutes with Resinol soap and hot water, then apply a little Resinol Ointment very gently. Let this stay on ten minutes, and wash off with Resinol Soap and more hot water, finishing with a dash of cold water to close the pores. Do this every morning and evening, and you will be surprised to see how quickly the healing, anti-septic Resinol balsams soothe and change every pore, leaving the complexion clear and velvety. Resinol stops itching instantly and speedily heals eczema, and other skin humors, dandruff, nose, burns and piles. Sold by every druggist, Resinol Ointment, 50 cts. and $1.00. Resinol Soap, 25 cts. For generous free trial, write Dept. A.M. Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

W. D. FULTON'S ANNOUNCEMENT

I desire to announce to the Democrats of Licking County and the Seventeenth Congressional District that I am a candidate for Congress

BUSINESS CONDITIONS

(Continued from Page One) have said, and are saying, the readjustments are over and the new is at its worst nothing like as bad as they feared and that at its best is helpful.

"Europe begins to see its way out of its deep depression, and last and best of all you know that sympathy with all that is finest and best in business life and with the highest ideals of our industrial activities is rampant at the seat of government. This is no longer the day of doubt but the hour of hope."

"Too much perhaps there has been the spirit on one side that 'what is, is wrong,' and the assertion on the other hand that 'what is, is right.' Big business has often failed to see that its methods have aroused a just popular resentment and that many of its ideals and purposes were impossible and intolerable in a democracy. The men of financial and corporate power have had to learn that the weal of the whole people is a supreme law to which their private interests must obediently bow. The business conscience has itself awakened to a realization of wrongs committed in the name and on the alleged behalf of commerce and industry and will tolerate these wrongs no more. Even the men of might in finance are becoming men of light and leading in the necessary readjustments that are pending. The business conscientiousness is becoming less individual and more social."

"I am not here, therefore, on any errand to arouse the business conscience or to raise the banner of revolt against business procedure, certainly not to denounce or to destroy. The sense of what is fit, the knowledge of what is due to their own honor, is now so keenly alive among the business community that when the achievements of our recent discussions shall have been finally wrought into law they will be, in my belief, not found wanting in willingness and power to take up such further work as may remain."

To Secretary Bryan, he asserted, belongs high credit for his cooperation with the Department of Commerce in smoothing the way to business progress in foreign markets. Mr. Redfield spoke at length on new methods adopted by the department to bring business men in closer touch with both domestic and foreign trade opportunities.

OUTLOOK VERY ENCOURAGING OVER COUNTRY

(Associated Press Telegrams)

New York, Jan. 24.—There was a marked improvement in feeling in the financial district this week, to which the stock market responded with a strong upward movement. The volume of business increased largely. Of especial significance was the amount of investment buying of bonds and high grade stocks, which reached proportions greater than at any previous time within many months.

The change in the securities market reflected distinct betterment in fundamental conditions. President Wilson's message to congress regarding anti-trust legislation relieved the market of uncertainty as to the attitude of the administration and the tone of the message was regarded as encouraging. Improvement in monetary conditions was shown by the accumulation of funds at this center, lower rates for money and reduction in discount rates of foreign banks. The change for the better in the investment market was indicated by the striking success of New York state's $51,000,000 issue of 4 1/2 per cent. bonds and their subsequent rapid resale by the successful bidders.

Sentiment was more hopeful in regard to the outlook for business. While in many lines no marked improvement was discernable, there were changes for the better in some cases. From the steel and copper trades came optimistic reports.

WILLING

(Continued from Page One.) Mayor Mitchell and told him there was a possibility that Col. Goethals might accept the commissionership. The mayor immediately took up the question with George W. Perkins with the result that Mr. Perkins went to Panama and has just returned with Col. Goethals conditional acceptance.

In discussing the reported intention of President Wilson to name Col. Goethals head of the Panama government, Lindley M. Garrison, secretary of war, who is in New York today said that the understanding in Washington was in accord with his idea of the situation. He had always supposed, he said, that Col. Goethals would be appointed Governor to the canal zone and believed that he would prefer to remain in Panama as long as he could be of service there.

The mayor added that if occasion demanded he would go to Washington to see President Wilson in the matter and that he expected at any rate to get in touch with the president shortly. He had no official knowledge, he said of any intention on the part of the president to offer Colonel Goethals the governorship of the canal zone, but he did expect that the president would grant the colonel's proposed request for retirement from the army. This he intimated would be the subject to be taken up with the president.

The two conditions imposed by Colonel Goethals as his retirement from the army and the enactment of legislation which will give the police commissioner power to remove subordinates with court reviews.

"I have not asked the president to retire Colonel Goethals as yet," said the mayor in reply to a question. "I am willing to wait several months for the colonel. I certainly never expected him to take the position until he has finished his duties in the canal zone."

Mayor Mitchell was in conference with counsel today preparing a bill to be submitted to the state legislature giving the police commissioner the power Colonel Goethals desires. He called Lieut. Gov. Wagner into conference and received his assurances that the bill would have the support of the administration at Albany.

Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

THE ONLY SAFE WAY

Take no chances with a prescription, take it to a drug store where you are assured of it being correctly compounded by a registered pharmacist. The City Drug store makes this statement: "No one who has not had years of experience in the preparation and compounding of medicines and who has not been properly licensed by our State Board of Pharmacy, is allowed to perform the responsible duty of preparing medicine for the sick, in our store."

This fact should be worth a great deal to the patrons of the City Drug Store for no one should be allowed to compound and dispense medicine who is not fully competent. The risk is far too great. Three registered pharmacists are in constant attendance at the City Drug Store and you can always bring or send your prescriptions here with the assurance of having them promptly and correctly filled.

FIRST NUMBER OF GRANVILLE MUSIC COURSE

M. Marcian Thalberg, Famous Piano Virtuosi to Appear at Opera House This Evening.

Granville, Jan. 24.—The Granville Music course will present as the opening number this evening, M. Marcian Thalberg. He is one of the foremost piano virtuosi of the day. This is his first trip to America, as most of his time has been spent in the capitals of Europe, where he has been notably successful. His recent concert in Cincinnati was one of the best of the season, according to press reports which will guarantee the excellence of the concert this evening.

The program contains numbers by Bach, Brahms, and Rubenstein, as well as numbers from Chopin, Beethoven Sonata, and Liszt. A more attractive program could scarcely be arranged containing so many favorite selections as well as novelties.

Marcian Thalberg is a native of Odessa, Russia. He received his early education in Lausanne and was prepared for a career as a piano virtuosi in the master classes of Dr. Carl Reinecke and Alfred Reisenauer at the Royal Conservatory of Leipzig. Since 1902 his home has been in Paris and he has made several tours in Europe with flattering success. He has accepted a position on the artist faculty of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, where he has been located since September, 1913.

Several very flattering criticisms have been made by the newspapers of Europe. The London Standard published the following: "M. Marcian Thalberg, who gave his first piano recital in England at Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon, arrives several generations too late to challenge comparison with his famous namesake. But the one time rival of Liszt would not have been ashamed of the executive attainments of his modern colleague. In the strenuous moments M. Thalberg's chord playing is most satisfying to the sensitive ear. Schumann's 'Etudes Symphoniques' exhibited the pianist's distinctive qualification most successfully. It is to a remarkable left hand that M. Thalberg owes much of his success. It never seemed to fail him in moments of the most urgent need, as was terribly shown in three Studies of Chopin. In three pieces by Liszt, M. Thalberg was entirely at home, meeting their executive requirements with effortless vigor. The St. Petersburg Zeitung says: 'M. Thalberg has power and delicacy, unusually plastic conception, large temperament, which are characteristic of his playing.' Other reports of similar nature have been published where he has appeared which are too numerous to mention. He will initiate the Granville lecture course this evening at 8 o'clock in the opera house."

Prisoners of General Villa, After Battle of Ojinaga, About to Be Shot, as is the Custom in the Warfare There

When they capture prisoners in one of the so-called battles of the Mexican trouble they don't parole them as is done by civilized nations. If they did the prisoners would sneak back into the ranks and begin firing again. If they were kept any length of time they would become expensive, for food is too costly. The easiest way out, according to all Mexicans, is to shoot the prisoners in cold blood. Since most of these warriors have a heavy strain of Indian blood in them they show some of the characteristics of the Redmen who fought on American plains for many years. The Indian usually scalped his prisoners, and of course they did not live long after the operation. This photograph was taken by the Mutual Film Corporation.
